IKE VAIL IN THE TOILS.

THE CONFIDENCE KING PULLED UP SHORT IN HOBOKEN.

A Long Career of Swindles Among Immigrants-His Neat Little Check Game-Going to the Pier in a Cab and Pretending to Be a Passenger Looking for Baggage-A Victim's Suicide.

Ike Vail, the king of the confidence men, the slipper est of the lot, a man who has swindled more people and served less time in prison than any of the gentry, is again in limbo. Capt. Gastlin, in the series of interesting police captains' stories published in THE EVENING WORLD, told of the first apprehension of this clever swindler. This time Ike's captor was Deputy Marshal Fred Bernhard, Besides his duties in the service of the General Government, Mr. Bernhard is employed by the North German Lloyd Steam ship Company to protect its patrons from thieves and swindlers at its Hoboken docks.

Vail and his gang of operators have been the bane of Bernhard's existence in his capacity of watchdog and has been plying his swindling trade for a year or more without being apprehended.

His method of operation was to go onto the dock when a steamy was about to sail and

His method of operation was to go onto the dock when a steamer was about to sail and rummage about the baggage as though to satisfy himself that his belongings were all right. Others, bona fide passengers, would be engaged in the same pursuit, and Ike would soon make himself acquainted as a fellow-passenger. This acquaintanceship would result in an invitation to take a drink, and in the walk across the park at Fourth street, in Hoboken, Ike would impart the information that his wife was at a hotel near by, and that he was going after her to put her aboard the steamer.

Would the new-found friend loan him a tile money, taking the check for scenrity?

The friend generally loaned the money and ept the check as a reminder of his encounter with Gentleman like.

Mr. Bernhard has several of these checks in his possession, one of which may result in Ike Vail's patronage of a convict tailor for Several years.

The check which he received as security was for $550, drawn on the Chemical Bank, of this city, by S. H. Hamilton & Co., to the order of George L. Morgan.

The money was all in German bills of 100 marks, &c., and was exchanged by Vail at Clark's money exchange, corner of Chambers street and Park row.

One of Ike's victims, a poor fellow who had been swindled by the Confidence King but of all his little savings, attempted to commit suicide by jumping from the steam-

Saturday just before the Werra sailed Vail appeared on the dock in search of prey.

Alarshal Bernhard's sharp eyes sighted him circulating among the passengers and their luggage and he immediately walked up to

Vail tried to hide his face, but the little

Marshal Bernhard says that if he cannot land Vail in prison at once he can, under the New Jersey law, have him sent up for at least three months as a suspicious character, and by the time that sentence expires he may secure from Germany the witnesses who can convict him of felony. Vail will be taken before Recorder Mc-Donough this afternoon.

In February last the avowed dynamiter had a writ of habeas corpus obtained in his behalf, and was brought before Judge Patterson on the plea that he was a sane man. Dr. Field examined him under an order of Court, and declared him still mad. It is not known by what means he now succeeds in having that decision overruled.

Mooney was in a Poughkeepsie lunation asylum before his attempt on the Queen, but was prematurely declared cured and released. He lives in Brooklyn, and it is expected he will show up there as soon as he can get

Mooney as a sane man complains bitterly of the treatment he received at the hands of those "for whom he ventured his life, liberty and property," and is particularly embittered against O'Donovan Rossa, with whom he says he had a falling out.

N. J. MRS, ARTHUR WALLACK'S DEATH.

Gap in the Wallack and Moss Families-Lester Wallack's Tribute.

The death of Mrs. Arthur Wallack, at the residence of her father, Theodore B. Moss, 543 Madison avenue, Saturday night, leaves a gap in two families which it will take long to heal. Mrs. Wallack was the oldest daughter of Theodore Moss, and her parents were greatly devoted to her. Mr. Lester Wallack could not have cared more for his daughter. In law had she been his own flesh and blood, "No pen or tongue," said a relative to an Evening World man this morning, "can tell what her loss is, nor her sweetness and self-sacrificing devotion. She was constantly thinking of others. Her tastes were very domestic. Contrary to what one might suppose, she had no connection with the stage, nor had she any actresses among her friends." Mrs. Wallack was at Mr. Lester Wallack's, in Stamford, three weeks ago. She insisted on coming back to New York. "I must see what tather and mother are going to do this summer," was all she said.

A few days after her return "Pettie," as she was called by her friends, fell ill. For a fortnight she was sick, but until the last the doctor held out the strongest hopes for recovery. When who falt herself devices the of Theodore Moss, and her parents were

After a touching farewell to her husband, she begged him to leave her alone for a few moments with her father and mother. He did so. Joining her parents' hands, she held them fondly in her own and died.

As soon as death was absolutely imminent Lester Wallack was telegraphed for and carry.

Mrs. Wallack had been married six years last March. She leaves no children. Her affectionate domestic disposition made her a model wife, and the grief of her parents, her husband and Mr. Lester Wallack are of the deepest. Mr. and Mrs. Moss are prostrated over the loss.

BAD WORK ACKNOWLEDGED.

MR. HAMILTON FISH TALKS TO THE FAS-SETTICOMMITTEE.

The Blame, However, He Says, Rests with the Civil-Service Commission for Send-ing Bad Men for Inspectors—He Also Reflects on the Accuracy of Gen. New ton's Statement About the Kubble Work,

The Special Senate Committee investigating into the conduct by the Aqueduct Com missioners of the immense work in their hands met again in the Tweed Court-House to-day. Chairman Fassett and Senators Mc Naughton, Hendricks and Van Cott were present, and Commissioner Hamilton Fish, jr., continued his testimony under cross-examination by De Lancey Nicoll. Not many questions were asked, for Mr.

Not many questions were asked, for Mr. Fish came "loaded for bear," and tolds running story backed up with documents, to which he frequently referred.

He said there had been no adverse report from Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, who was then Corporation Counsel, to the resolution regarding extra excavation, and as Mr. O'Brien was present at every meeting of the commission he supposed that the latter favored the resolution or he never would have voted for it.

Judge Spencer, Gen. Newton and Commissioner Barnes composed the special committee. The eight-inch allowance, "typical cross section" was adopted, but the contractors objected.

tors objected.
"I say," reiterated Mr. Fish, in answer to Senator Fassett, "that Judge O'Brien's adverse opinion, if he had any, was never reported to the commission by the special committee; but Judge O'Brien was always presported to the commission by the special committee: but Judge O'Brien was always present, and the commission, fearing law suits, disregarded the protests of the contractors and adopted the typical cross-section as the most equitable basis of settlement."

Regarding the question of filling in about the tubing with rubble masonry, Mr. Fish said the Construction Committee consisted of Gen. Newton and Commissioners Barnes and Spencer. They held a meeting, but left the decision of the rubble masonry question to Chief Engineer Church.

"Gen. Newton says he knew nothing about this question and its $1,000,000 extra expense, but he was present at the meeting and voted for the resolution."

By resolution offered by Gen. Newton, Commissioners Ridgway and Fish were dropped from the Construction Committee, but Jan. 1, 1887, the whole commission was made a Committee on Construction. On April 19, 1887, the rubble matter was considered, and on June 13 a report was made by Consulting Engineer Alphonse Fteley adverse to the use of rubble masonry all along the Aqueduct, but only where the rock was unsound.

"Gen. Newton was present at that meet."

the Aqueduct, but only where the rock was unsound.

"Gen. Newton was present at that meeting," said Mr. Fish, "and Commissioners Dowd and Ridgway came in and were much interested in the discussion. Mr. Fteley thought, however, that where there was any doubt the rubble should be used.

The contract gave full power in the matter to the chief engineer, and he favored the rubble, and I doubt if the commission could have prevented his using it. Of course he might have been removed.

"Had work certainly existed," continued Mr. Fish, "but it was only a small proportion and it was repaired largely before this committee was appointed. The bad character of the work was due to the bad character of the work was due to the bad character of the inspectors. The Civil-Service Commission sent us men who had failed to pass the examination. Sometimes it was impossible to get enough men and when they did come they were very inefficient."

Mr. Boardman announced that he wanted to examine Commissioners Baldwin and Dowd and Inspector Dowling, and that he would consume two days. Mr. De Lancey Nicoll called the names of Walston H. Brown, ex-Secretary James W. McCullagh, ex-Mayor Edson, Clinton Beck of the firm of Brown, Howard & Co., Mr. Grant, Mr. Spaulding, Col. Heman Clark, Commissioners Dowd and Baldwin and Gen. Thomas. He said they were his witnesses and asked that they be excused till Wednesmissioners Dowd and Baldwin and Gen.

Thomas. He said they were his withesses and asked that they be excused till Wednesday. This was done and Mr. Fish resumed. He said that the Aqueduct Commission formerly consisted of certain city officials and five of them were Democrats and one Republican. Gen. Husted suggested that as the Legislature was Republican in both branches, a bill might passed, changing the commission favorably to the Republican party and Mr. Fish drew such a bill and it was passed in May, 1886.

"I considered Maurice B. Flynn inimical to the bill, and that Rollin M. Squire opposed it and had drawn up a bill making him the sole commissioner. But I called on neither of these men. I have never been in Mr. Flynn's office.

"I never had any conversation with Gov. Hill on the subject before nor after its passage, although I received my appoint ment from him. I asked Judge Muller to favor the bill. He said he would do so.

"After I introduced the bill I visited Albany in its interest four or five times. There He said they were hi bany in its interest four or five times. There never was a contract passed except to the lowest bidder after I became a Commissioner.

"I voted to give work to Clark & O'Brien on one occasion because they were doing the other work in that locality."

other work in that locality."

In advocating the pa-sage of the bill, Mr. Fish said he told Republican legislators that the work was to be done in Putnra and Westchester counties: and Republican control of the work weuld be advantageous to the Republicans there.

The Mayor was included among the Commissioners ex officio, and it was passed by the Senate. But in the Assembly the Mayor was lopped off. Then the Senate passed the bill as amended. All the Republicans voted affirmatively in both houses, five Democrats in each House voting no.

"Now, Mr. Fish." asked Mr. Nicoll, "had you received any promise, directly or indi-you received any promise, directly or indi-rectly, from Gov. Hill, that you would be appointed a Commissioner?"

"No, sir. My Senator and Assemblyman spoke for me after the bill was passed urging me as a representative of the district most affected.

me as a representative of the district most affected.

"I know of no promise or encouragement that either of the commissioners would be apponted. By the bill I succeeded in getting virtually three Republicans and four Democrats into the Commission, as Mr. Barnes was no politician and leaned towards the Republican side,"

"And the effect has been advantageous to your party in Putnam and Westchester?"

"I would hardly like to go on record on that. I can say, though, that our majorities have been larger since than they were before the charge. But I never was approached before nor after my appointment by any contractor, nor from any contractor as to how I should vote on any point."

The latter again went off to pay the bill, and up to the present time had not returned. The Nova Scotian, after waiting in vain at the depot for nearly two hours, informed an officer, who told him he had met a sharper.

JOSIE'S FRIENDS WILL MAKE AN APPEAL FOR HIM TO-NIGHT.

The Hearing of "The Evening World's" Demand for an Inspection of the Juve nile Asylum's Books to Be Had This Afternoon-Mr. DeLancey Nicoli to Pre sent the Case in Court.

Judging from the wide and ever increasing nterest which it is exciting among the people of this city, the case of little Josie Shephard. the exiled orphan boy, bids fair to become one of the most celebrated in the annals of the town.

Day after day THE EVENING WORLD has given to the public the result of its investigation of the matter, and has shown conclusively how he was sent away by misrepresentations on the part of those whose duty it was to see that the child should be supported by his natural guardians, if he had any, and by furnishing insufficient evidence of the facts in his case to those gentlemen who compose the Indenturing Committee of the Juvenile Hospital.
At the present time there is hardly a per-

At the present time there is hardly a person in the city who does not know of the case in all its details, and follow with interest each step in the proceedings which, it is hoped, will bring Josie back to his home and friends once more.

The case will come up late this afternoon in the Supreme Court Chambers, before Judge Ingraham, on a motion for a mandamus to compel the officers of the New York Inventie Asylum to permit a representative

The Evening World has already explained

THE EVENING WORLD has already explained that the law provides that this book, in which the names of the children committed to the institution, together with the date of their entrance and discharge and parentage, are registered, shall be always kept open for the inspection of any one wishing to examine it. Although the law on this subject is explicit Supt. Carpenter, of the House of Reception, who has the custody of the book, and is bound to show it whenever requested to do so, refused to produce it on three separate occasions when requested to do so by The Evening World's representative, and application to Secretary Peter Carter meeting with equal ill-success it was decided to compet the officers under the law to permit the shock to be examined.

with equal ill-success it was decided to compel the officers under the law to permit the book to be examined.

The argument in behalf of The Evening World will be made this afternoon by Mr. De Lancey Nicoll, its counsel, who will show what the law requires and how its provisions were set at defiance by Supt. Carpenter.

The Indenturing Committee, of which Mr. Charles D. Adams is Chairman, which sent Josie Shephard away upon the misrepresentations of Supt. Carpenter, will have one of its regular meetings to night at the House of Reception, in Thirteenth street. The grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Shephard; Mr. Andrew Grant and his friends will be there to make another effort to induce the committee to bring back the child.

They will show the committee that they were misled by the representations made by Supt. Carpenter, that they are able to take care of the child, and that it was sent away from them without "... affort being made to notify them that the boy was to be trans-

Carpenter to send no notification to relatives of a child in the institution unless they are his parents, and there is pretty conclusive proof that no such notification as the rules of the asylum require was sent to Mrs. Shephard before Josie was sent away.

There are many people who are willing to testify as to Mr. Grant's ability to support the child if he gets it for adoption, and they will be present to-night to give their aid in recovering the child.

If Josie is not at once brought back from the West and restored to his friends, it will not be because there is any lack of evidence to show that a great wrong has been done.

QUEEN NATHALIE'S PROTEST.

Says She Has Absolutely Nothing With Which to Reproach Herself.

INT CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION. LONDON, July 9. - Queen Nathalie of Ser via has forwarded to the Pall Mall Gazette s series of telegrams sent by her to the Servian Prime Minister and the Metropolitan of Belgrade. In them she asserts that she is igno. rant of any cause for divorce from King Milan, and trusting to God's justice she will never consent to it.

She declares to the Metropolitan that she has absolutely nothing with which to reproach herself. She has no fear of the light and will accept no clandestine settlement of the difficulty. She charges him not to burden his soul with another sin, and conclude with a strong protestation against the divorce, which she denounces as an indignity and an illegality,

THE ACCUSED FIREMEN.

Conners and Keegan Will Have Ample Jus tice Done to Them.

The accusations of theft against Fireman William J. Connors and Joseph Keegan, of Engine 14, has caused a great sensation among the firemen, many of whom were loth to believe the charges.

Capt, Shay has not yet presented charges against the men, and it is believed that when he does present his indictment it will be for conduct prejudicial to good order. Col. Carl Jussen, the secretary of the Fire Department, said to an Evenno World re-porter this morning: "This is a matter that affects the entire department, and the Com-missioners have ordered a thorough investimissioners have ordered a thorough investigation.

"Both of the men are exceptionally good firemen, especially Keegan, who ranks far ahead of many men on the force. Connors has been in the department four years and Keegan nearly five, during which time they have only had one charge each, and that for trivial offenses.

"The Commissioners, and in fact every one in the department, would feel glad if their innocence were established, but no partiality will be shown, and the strictest investigation will be made."

NO "BLOW OVER."

The Policy Cases to Go Before the Grand Jury.

Indictments of the Gamblers Expected on Wednesday.

A Newsboy, Robbed of His Little Earnings in the Poke Shops, Appeals to "The Evening World" for Assistance - Reporters Visit the Dive and Get Evidence -A New Dodge by Which it in Hoped t Evade the Law.

If the people engaged in the despicable business of selling policy, who were run to earth by THE EVENING WORLD, are hugging the fond delusion to their souls that they are to escape the punishment, their just due, they are doomed to disappointment. .

Heretofore prosecution of policymen has frequently ended without a trial, and the police have complained that this fact has rendered their attempts to suppress the "poke shops" abortive.

With the present malefactors, whom THE EVENING WORLD has brought face to face with stern-featured Justice, it will not be so. District-Attorney Fellows promises that the cases of McCurdy, Smith, Siebert, Collins and the rest will be presented to the Grand Jury on Wednesday, and their indictment is then a matter of course. The vacation term of the General Sessions is only run for the disposition of prison cases, but it is thought that Recorder Smyth will recognize the necessity for the administration of an immediate and sharp lesson to these poke-shop proprietors, and allow the placing of their cases upon the calendar for immediate trial.

Among the many letters sent to The Evening World giving information concerning policy shops and policy playing is this:

ING WORLD giving information concerning policy shops and policy playing is this:

To the Edition of The Evening World:

I have the pleasure in writing to you about the policy shops on the east side. I am a newsbey and sell This Evening World:

I have the pleasure in writing to you about the policy shops on the east side. I am a newsbey and sell This Evening World and I lose all my earnings in the policy shop at 3 Gouvernaur street, one door from Front street. The policy writer's name is Stump, and if you should hit a gig he will put up a wrong number.

It is becoming very common for newsboys to stake their small earnings in the policy game. They are allured into this sort of gambling by the fishy stories of the policy writers of the immense winnings which always await them at these gambling hells.

The shop in which this newsboy has lost his money is in a front room of No. 6 Gouverneur slip, next door to a barber shop and just west of Front street. The front door is kept barred and the only entrance left open is through a dark hallway between the policy shop and the barber shop, then through a door just behind a stairway, which opens into a dark room in the rear of the room in which the policy slips are sold.

The proprietor is George Stump, a decrept little old man. He has gray hair and which he receives on all his receipts.

There is a desk in the front part of the room and the little light that finds its way there is admitted through a window carefully screened.

The old man was sitting alone behind his

The old man was sitting alone behind his desk with his head drooping down on his shoulder when two Evening World World Reporters went in there this morning.

When he saw two strangers enter he pulled himself to his feet and inquired their errand himself to his feet and inquired their errand there.

"We want try our luck in your policy game," said one reporter. "Will you accommodate us?"

"Yes, I will let you try your luck, but you will have to write your ticket yourself."

This revealed a new dodge to evade punishment. In order to secure a warrant for their arrest one must see them sell a ticket, and to convict them of anything beyond a misdemeanor the policy alip must be presented in court.

Taking a piece of brown paper which Stpmp handed him, one of the reporters paid 25 cents and wrote:

25 cents and wrote : 14-21-36.

He then tried to have Stump write the date or something else on the slip, but he would not do this.

"No." said he, "I will not write anything on it." No. Said he,

Stump took the slip and copied the numbers on his book, as the combination of tissue paper and carbon paper is called.

He told the reporters that he would have the returns of the morning drawing at 2.30 A Horse's Kick Hilled Him.
